Canada Council Conseil des Arts for the Arts du Canada

In 2013, when we rebranded as University of Regina Press, our team chose the motto, "a voice for many peoples."

We did this to highlight the kind of publishing house we wanted to be: a place that seeks to publish traditionally underrepresented voices, to create space for them, and to celebrate them in Saskatchewan, across Canada, and on the world stage.

Of course, we couldn't do any of this without the ongoing support and faith placed in us by the University of Regina and our authors, whose brilliance and clear-eved truths leave us in awe and make us all want to do better. This season's writers are no exception. First-time author Helen Knott's memoir of abuse, addiction, and recovery shows how sisterhood, family, community, and ceremony can help resist the legacy of colonial trauma. The recipient of a troubling gift, Irene Oore grapples with the terrible knowledge expressed in her mother's stories of the Holocaust, Somalian-Canadian writer Mohamed Abdulkarim Ali tells of his struggles to find a place in Toronto as a gay Muslim newcomer, and poet Sadie McCarney gives voice to coming of age and queerness in a small Atlantic town.

In some cases, practising one's art brings unbidden consequences, as when pioneering theatre director Florence Bean James is forced to flee McCarthyist persecution for producing the "wrong" type of theatre. Like Mary Soderstrom's "odd" geographical neighbours, these works dovetail and diverge. We're also hearing from scholars and teachers at home and across the globe about knowledge that can help save and restore lives, languages, communities, relationships, and even democracy. Compiled and edited with the help of Elders and Language Keepers, a Nakoda language textbook provides a critical resource for classrooms, as does esteemed scholar James Frideres's introduction to Indigenous-settler relations. which helps do the necessary work of truth before reconciliation. Our edited collections-one on Indigenous theatre as an exuberant way of creating and affirming identity; another on barebacking in the age of PrEP; and a final one honouring the work of Allan Blakeney, a politician committed to sustaining a robust democracy-help us advance knowledge near and far.

Telling stories-whether as memoir or nonfiction or scholarship-comes with great responsibilities. So does publishing them. Over the past six years, we have learned that it matters who tells what story. It matters who helps shape them. It matters how and where they are shared. As we continue to grow our list, we'll be keeping that foremost in mind. Publishing is always an act of collaboration. In that sense, our motto isn't just for many peoples-but from many peoples, too.

In My Own Moccasins A Memoir of Resilience

by Helen Knott, foreword by Eden Robinson

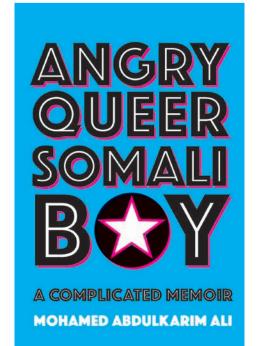

"A beautiful rendering of how recovery for our peoples is inevitably about reconnecting with Indigenous identities, lands, cultural and healing practices." -Kim Anderson, author of Reconstructing Native Womenhood elen Knott, a highly accomplished Indigenous woman, seems to have it all. But in her memoir, she offers a different perspective. In My Own Moccasins is an unflinching account of addiction, intergenerational trauma, and the wounds brought on by sexual violence. It is also the story of sisterhood, the power of ceremony, the love of family, and the possibility of redemption.

With gripping moments of withdrawal, times of spiritual awareness, and historical insights going back to the signing of Treaty 8 by her great-great grandfather, Chief Bigfoot, her journey exposes the legacy of colonialism, while reclaiming her spirit.

Helen Knott is a Dane Zaa, Nehiyaw, and mixed Euro-descent woman living in Fort St. John, British Columbia. In 2016 Helen was one of sixteen global change makers featured by the Nobel Women's Initiative for being committed to end gender-based violence. Helen was selected as a 2019 RBC Taylor Prize Emerging Author. This is her first book.

Eden Robinson is the awardwinning author of Monkey Beach, Son of a Trickster, and other novels. She is a member of the Haisla and Heiltsuk First Nations.

Angry Queer Somali Boy

A Complicated Memoir

by Mohamed Abdulkarim Ali

"A tour de force." - Omayra Issa, Radio-Canada

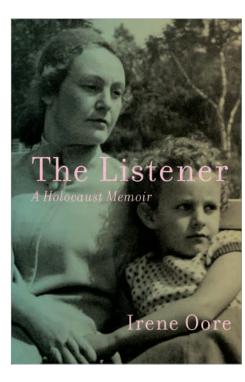

riting from a homeless shelter in downtown Toronto, Mohamed "Mo" Ali chronicles how he ended up there in this powerful and often irreverent memoir of exile, addiction, and racism.

Kidnapped by his father on the eve of Somalia's societal implosion, Ali was taken first to the Netherlands by his stepmother, and then on to Canada. With its promise of freedom, opportunity, and multiculturalism, his new home seemed to offer a new lease on life. But unable to fit in, he turned to partying and drugs.

Interwoven with world history and sociopolitical commentary on Somalia, Canada, and Europe, the story of this gay Muslim immigrant is told with tenderness in a refreshing and welcome new voice.

The Listener A Holocaust Memoir

by Irene Oore

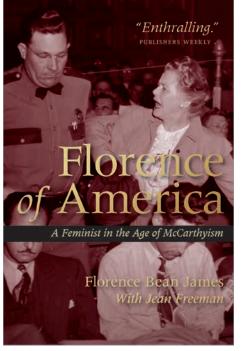

A reflection on how trauma is passed from generation to generation.

n The Listener, a daughter receives a troubling gift: her mother's stories of surviving World War II in Poland. Irene Oore's Jewish mother married a Gentile Polish officer, which allowed her to escape the death camps. But constantly on the verge of starvation, she lived a harrowing and peripatetic existence as she struggled to keep her own mother and sister alive.

Throughout the memoir, Oore reveals a certain ambivalence towards the gift bestowed upon her. The stories of fear, love, and constant hunger traumatised her as a child. Now she shares these same stories with her own children, to keep the history alive.

Irene Oore is the co-author of Marie-Claire Blais: An Annotated Bibliography.
Born in Łódź, Poland, she immigrated to Israel as a child and is now a professor of French at Dalhousie University in Halifax.

Florence of America

A Feminist in the Age of McCarthyism

by Florence Bean James, with Jean Freeman preface by Jean Freeman, editor's introduction by Sean Prpick

"An object lesson in courage and vision." – Mark F. Jenkins, playwright of All Powers Necessary and Convenient orn on the Idaho frontier, Florence James was a New York City suffragette. The first to put Jimmy Cagney on stage, she founded both the Negro Repertory Theatre and the Seattle Repertory Playhouse. She worked with Francis Farmer, Paul Robson, and Helen Hayes, but her views on art and politics and her choice of plays led to a clash with the Un-American Activities Committee. In the wake of two Kafkaesque trials, where she condemned her persecutors as liars, she fled to Canada and kick-started professional theatre in Saskatchewan, the home to North America's first socialist government.

This new edition of Fists Upon a Star (called "sensational" by Jimmy Cagney) tells an inspiring story of one woman speaking truth to power.

Praise for earlier edition:

"An amazing story of achievement, heartbreak, and endurance...But above all, it is a moving and powerful cautionary tale of what can happen, at any time of any age, when, in [Arthur] Miller's words, a whole world begins to cry 'spirits." -Moira Day, Department Head of Drama, University of Saskatchewan

Jean Freeman is a celebrated performer and author and the recipient of ACTRA's Woman of the Year award and an honorary doctorate from University of Regina. She lives in Regina.

SADIE MCCARNEY

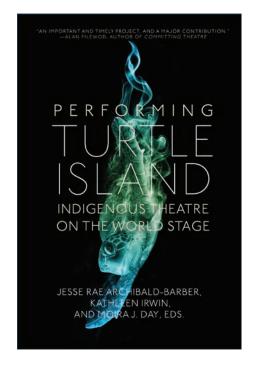

Live Ones

by Sadie McCarney

"Crosses between the quotidian and the fantastical...these poems hook you with the first line." -Kathy Mac, author of Human Misunderstanding adie McCarney's first full-length poetry collection grapples with mourning, coming of age, and queer identity against the backdrop of rural and small-town Atlantic Canada. Ranging from pellet-gunned backyard butterflies to a chorus of encroaching ghosts, Live Ones celebrates the personal and idiosyncratic aspects of death, seeing them as intimately wedded to lives well-lived. Personal myth-making collides with grocery shopping, ancient history turns out to be alive and well in modern-day Milford, Nova Scotia, and the complexities of queer female desire call out to us from beyond the grave.

In McCarney's exuberant imagination, the past, present, and future rarely stay where they're put. Sadie McCarney's poetry has appeared in Plenitude, Grain, Prairie Fire, The Malahat Review, The Puritan, Room, and The Best Canadian Poetry in English, among other places. She lives in Charlottetown. This is her first book.

Arrows in a Quiver

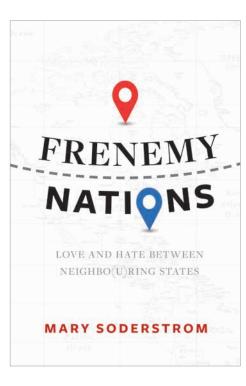

From Contact to the Courts in Indigenous-Canadian Relations

by James Frideres

"A useful introduction to Indigenous issues, especially for post-secondary students in Canada." –Jonathan Dewar, co-editor of Cultivating Canada: Reconciliation through the Lens of Cultural Diversity ritten in an accessible style and ideal for classroom use. Arrows in a Quiver provides an overview of Indigenous-settler relations, including how land is central to Indigenous identity and how the Canadian state marginalizes Indigenous people. Illustrating the various "arrows in a quiver" that Indigenous people use to fight back, such as grassroots organizing, political engagement, and the courts, Frideres situates "settler colonialism" historically and explains why decolonization requires a fundamental transformation of longstanding government policy for reconciliation to occur. The historical, political, and social context provided by this text offers greater understanding and theorizes what the effective devolution of government power might look like.

James Frideres is the author of Aboriginal Peoples in Canada and First Nations in the 21st Century. He lives in Calgary.

Frenemy Nations

Love and Hate between Neighbo(u)ring States

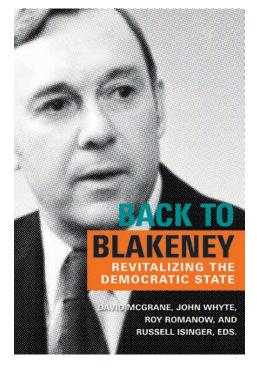

by Mary Soderstrom

How can neighbours that are geographically side by side be worlds apart politically, culturally, ideologically, and economically?

n Frenemy Nations, Mary Soderstrom presents a unique perspective on the strife caused by the "narcissism of small differences" between neighbouring jurisdictions. She examines some of the world's odd couples, including Canada and the United States; Quebec and the rest of Canada; New Hampshire and Connecticut; Haiti and the Dominican Republic; Brazil and Spanish-speaking Latin America; Rwanda and Burundi; and many more.

While geographical proximity can make for cordial relationships, colonial histories, language, women's roles, differing levels of education, and competition for resources can also lead to conflict.

Mary Soderstrom is the author of numerous books, including Road Through Time: The Story of Humanity on the Move and Desire Lines: Stories of Love and Geography. She lives in Montréal.

Back to Blakeney

Revitalizing the Democratic State

edited by David McGrane, John Whyte, Roy Romanow, and Russell Isinger

"I can think of no other biographical work in this country that is so competent in its multi-faceted approach to its subject." -David Edward Smith, author of The Constitution in a Hall of Mirrors: Canada at 150

llan Blakeney believed in government as a force for good. As premier of Saskatchewan, he promoted social justice through government intervention in the economy and the welfare state. He created legal and constitutional structures that guaranteed strong human rights, and he safeguarded the integrity of the voting system to support a robust democracy. Blakeney encouraged excellence in public administration to deliver the best possible services and used taxes to help secure equality of opportunity.

In Back to Blakeney, scholars reflect on Blakeney's achievements, as well as his constitutional legacy—namely, the notwithstanding clause—and explore the challenges facing democracy today.

Raw PrEP, Pedagogy, and the Politics of Barebacking

edited by Ricky Varghese, afterword by Tim Dean

How is the practice of barebacking understood and represented across media, theory, and policy?

arking the tenth anniversary of Tim Dean's seminal work, Raw returns to the question of sex without condoms, or barebacking, a timely topic in the age of PrEP, a drug that virtually eliminates the transmission of HIV. The authors in Raw push Dean's conclusions and show the urgent need to consider condomless sex, as it is still illegal for HIV-positive people in many jurisdictions.

"Significantly broadens the field of scholarship on bareback, notably by including pieces on bareback in heterosexual pornography, by making connections with lesbian and BDSM identities and practices, and by discussing the experience of Black bareback bottoms and treating sex education considerations." -Oliver Davis, author of Jacques Rancière
